Wuhu City

Wuhu is located in the southeast of Anhui Province, on the southeastern bank of the Yangtze River. It is 119 kilometers (74 miles) from the capital city of the province, Hefei and about 130 kilometers (80 miles) upstream from Nanjing in Jiangsu province. Since ancient times, it has earned the reputation of a fertile “land of fish and rice”.

The picturesque and charming garden city in recent years has won many titles, such as National Civilized City, Pilot City of Innovation, E-commerce Demonstration City, Information Consumption Demonstration City, Model City for Land and Resources Conservation and Intensive Utilization.

Wuhu Xuanzhou Airport is about 40 km from downtown, and Nanjing Luokou International Airport and Hefei Xinqiao Airport are within two hours drive. Major cities can be easily reached by high speed trains.

Introduction to ATCMEE

The history of Anhui Technical College of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering (ATCMEE) can be traced back to 1935 when it was founded as Wuhu Saint Aloysius School. It is directly affiliated to the Education Department of Anhui Provincial Government and listed as one of the National Key Colleges and the A-level Candidate Colleges of “Plan for the Construction of High-level Vocational Colleges and Specialties with Chinese Characteristics”.

With 12 schools and 600 faculty and teaching staff, ATCMEE is now offering 45 programs to 12,000 full time students on campus. Students of ATCMEE have been very competitive and won over 500 prizes in various professional contests at both of provincial and national levels, such as National Skills Contest for Vocational Colleges.

We have developed joint programs with academic institutions from Canada, Germany, Australia and other countries for student cultivation and teaching staff training to enhance international cooperation and communication, and we also recruited international students from Cambodia, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Bangladesh, Russia and other “One Belt One Road” countries.
